I went to New York from Boston to celebrate with one of my really good friends. We hit the sticks left and right and ran into the Stumble inn. We gave the rems our IDs and he turned us down! You know why? Because we're from Alaska and our Alaskas were fake. Now I understand that it looks suspicious that it's from somewhere so far away, and bouncers are supposed to be on the look out for fakes, but these were our legitimate IDs and it was funny to be denied entry simply because it's from somewhere that's not very often! Besides, it looked like a nice bar.
